2010 Report from the Editors of *Antichthon

The editors of Antichthon, Elizabeth Minchin and Peter Davis, report that Volume 44 (2010) was distributed in late 2009 and early 2010.

The contents of Volume 45 have now been finalised. We expect that this issue will appear in the first half of 2011 and will contain nine contributions: two from scholars based in the United States and seven from scholars based in Australasia. One of the US papers is a very substantial essay on Homer by Professor Kurt Raaflaub, the keynote speaker at the 2010 conference at UWA. The Australasian contributions are largely on literary and historical themes. This issue is larger than usual because we expect that the 2012 issue will be a thematic number associated with the visit of Professor Erich Gruen.

The editors' task is to invite submissions for Antichthon, to select referees, to make final decisions on the basis of the referees' reports, and to communicate with the authors during the period that leads up to acceptance or otherwise of the submission. The editors thank wholeheartedly those colleagues who give up their research time to review submissions and then to write generous and helpful comments for the author. And, once again, we must thank Bruce Marshall, our excellent formatter, who takes on all the problems of production (and there are many!) and worries away at them until they are elegantly resolved.
